In 1944, Amie L. Mathy and a team of contractors headed to La Crosse, WI, to construct government projects for WWII. Postwar, Amie established a construction company in response to growing demand in the area in 1945. The company grew quickly and started specializing in laying hot mix asphalt. Subsequent generations of the Mathy family entered the business, expanding operations and bringing forth national recognition, as the company grew to specialize in projects such as interstate highways, airfields, commercial parking lots and residential streets, among others.

Today, Mathy construction is a renowned leader in the asphalt paving industry, providing hot mix asphalt production and placement throughout the Midwest, and is a leading contractor for the transportation industry.
